I just wanted to ask a general question. If basically I wanted to go higher than, say, the director of Enfield Civic Centre, Ian Davis, in short, I'm trying to put some logic behind it, like who I'd go to go above Ian Davis, because he's supposed to be the highest in that building, if that makes any sense. And my logic to it is... I want to get to, basically what I'm trying to do is I understand that normally a lot of companies when they're founded and start and built they have a commissioning group like if you was to look at lawyers or any bank services you have lots of different branches and then you have the main HQ. I was trying to work out, okay, well, Enfield Civic Centre's just like Hackney. It must be like a branch or something, and you must have a commissioning group that commissions all of these and that would actually hire Ian Davis and say, well, you run this branch. Who is the commissioning group, and how would I get in contact with the commissioning group for all councils? I honestly have no idea. I mean, the only way that you probably would be able to get that information is if I give you an email. Okay. I've already got it. Go on, what is the rest of it? I'm not being really shy. Yeah, complaints and information at enfield.gov.uk. Okay. Does it make sense what I'm actually saying, though? About there being a HQ or... Like, even St Anza's got it, because it's a government... Of a commissioning group that actually commissions like St Anne's Hospital is the commissioning group for all of the other hospitals and they're in charge of all the other hospitals in North London and the same happens when like even Enfield Homes has a merendum when you there's six company structures that you can have and one of the company structures is like a CI community interest company or an association like yourselves and what you can do what they normally do is have a memorandum of articles of association and what happens is a commissioning group would come and say well this branch needs a manager we're going to hire Ian Davis and Ian Davis will sign the memorandum and he will stick to the memorandum, then what he'll get is a memorandum of articles of association, which means it holds all of the property to the company, and he'll be signed under a capital of no share under the 1963 Act. So it means that he's running the company, but he doesn't actually own the company, and what's not, because... And so someone has to hire him in the beginning and they hire each, you know, and all the, if that civic centre ends up in trouble for a surface cash or for revenue or something, it can tap in in its constitution to the other civic centres and it can borrow solicitors from other, like from Haringey, well you needed a solicitor, you can go and hire one like Michael or pull him over from the other company over to that company. Because all the civic centres are supposed to have workers a whole at the end of it to help solve all of the problems. But anyway, I'm going to continue. I'm going to get off the phone. I'll take your advice.

Thank you for your help, madam. No problem at all, sir. Good luck with that one, OK?

OK. All right. Bye. All right. Talk to you then. Bye-bye. Bye.
