Here's the cleaned Speaker 1 / Speaker 2 version of the transcript.

Speaker 2 (Mr Cordell):
Just need to get my pen out.
What's my name?
Cordell?

Speaker 1 (Solicitor / Reception):
Yep.
Yep.

Speaker 2 (Mr Cordell):
Mm-hmm.
Mm-hmm.
Mm-hmm.
No, no, but I understand the law and I understand the Time Limitation Act 1980.

Speaker 1 (Solicitor / Reception):
But it depends on the nature of the charge.
Some cases have a limitation period of six months if they're summary-only offences.
If it's not a summary-only offence, then they can take longer to charge you for the offence.

Speaker 2 (Mr Cordell):
It's threats to kill.
What it is, is threats to kill without an offensive weapon.
Threats to kill only becomes a more serious indictable offence if an offensive weapon is involved.
This happened while I was in my house.
I supposedly made a phone call to a council employee.
I've got the recording of the employee here now.
I told him that I had checked Companies House and found names of other people that he was associated with.
I was doing my homework on him.
He got upset and told me:
"I'm going to kill you and your mother."
I've got that recording here.
He told me:
"I'm going to kill you and your mother."

Speaker 1 (Solicitor / Reception):
Mm-hmm.

Speaker 2 (Mr Cordell):
The courts are making it very hard.
I'm just going through another route because the Time Limitation Act period is over and it's a non-indictable offence without an offensive weapon being used.

I just wanted the case to be dropped under the Time Limitation Act and I was asking if you could help me make that happen.

Speaker 1 (Solicitor / Reception):
Okay.
Let me just put you through to H if he's available.
Just one moment.

Speaker 2 (Mr Cordell):
Right.
Thank you.

Call Transferred

Speaker 2 (Mr Cordell):
Hello.
How are you doing?
I believe this is Ali, sir.
How are you doing?
It's Mr Simon Cordell.
I was pleased to meet you at Wood Green Police Station, I believe on the 1st.
I was just wondering if you could help me with the progress of the case.
You've sent me a letter recently explaining that the case is ongoing and remains under investigation by the police officer.
I understood that because the incident happened on the 1st of January, the Time Limitation Act would expire on the 1st of June.
So I believed the case had been disposed of because the police officer had not brought charges within the limitation period.
I understand that in certain cases, where there are more serious offences, longer periods can apply.
But because no offensive weapon was used in this incident, the normal recommendation by a judge would be much lower.
I was wondering whether you could confirm whether the Time Limitation Act still applies and whether the case has been disposed of.
Because while I was at the police station with you, as you understood, they said someone was going to try and serve me.
A third-party company was going to be allowed into the police station to serve paperwork on me while I was in a cell, which I believe was not in accordance with the normal service procedures.
That did happen after you left and after my appropriate adult left.
Someone came to my cell door.
They did not enter the cell.
They did not hand me any paperwork.
But they attempted to serve me.
I covered my ears and went into the far corner of the cell.
The police officer did not allow the man into the cell.
I was standing there looking at the camera saying:
"La, la, la, la."

Echoing through the corridor so I couldn't be served.
I was bailed shortly afterwards.
While I was in the police station and all this was happening, a gentleman came to my home address.

Notes

This transcript is unusually clear compared with some of the others:

- Speaker 1 = Solicitor's office / receptionist.
- Speaker 2 = Mr Cordell.
- The section beginning "Hello, how are you doing? I believe this is Ali, sir..." was not a live conversation. It was a voicemail message left after being transferred.
- The recording ends when the voicemail system confirms: "Message saved."
