Dear Georgina, Dear DS Johnston, Dear DC Knox,

I am writing because everything that has happened over the last few months has left my life, my home, and my rights in complete disarray, and all of you hold pieces of the same information. You have all confirmed that you have communicated with one another, regarding both my tenancy succession case and my sister Deon's housing situation and because of that, I need to bring everything together clearly, in one place, so nothing is misunderstood or overlooked any further.

Our mother passed away on 8 April 2026. I never got to see her again after she died. I was her eldest child, and 23 Byron Terrace has always been my home. I lived there with her, and it was my main residence. I applied for my legal right to succeed the tenancy on 11 May 2026, only days after losing her, because that home is the only stable place I have ever had. On the day of her funeral, 29 May 2026, I was unable to attend because of police bail conditions that were placed on me after the incident involving my sister Deon. I had to miss my own mother's funeral. I had to miss saying goodbye. I had to miss returning to my home where she was placed after her funeral. All of this happened causing the worst period of bereavement in my life.

Everything that happened on 9 May 2026 was not spontaneous. It was the result of a clear, deliberate plan by my sister Deon, and the police knew this from the moment they arrested me because I handed them my phone and told them to check the messages. They saw the threats. They saw the admissions. They saw the recordings. After I was released, I sent the same evidence to them again. At no point should they have contacted the council or removed me from my own home, especially not while holding proof that Deon had premeditated the entire incident.

The WhatsApp messages speak for themselves. On 2 May 2026, her boyfriend James wrote: "Mention my name again watch how I move I'm not a boy." Minutes later he escalated: "Your a crackhead... Silly cunt watch your getting we are all coming to get you... Go and section yourself before me and Deon come and get you." These were not arguments — they were threats of violence.

On 3 May 2026, Deon wrote: "You are not kicking me out of my mum's house... carry on Simon and u will end up all alone with no one." She accused me of letting "crackhead friends" into the house. She was already building the false narrative she later used against me. On 6 May 2026 she wrote: "I'm coming home. I'm moving into Mum's house tomorrow." This was despite the fact she was living in her temporary accommodation, which is shown in the video evidence I gave the police — she is lying on the bed fixing her TV while I was helping her. She was not living at my mother's home.

On 7 May 2026 she escalated again: "We're coming there right now... You're telling me I'm not coming there, yeah watch... Bro, the man name is coming for you now." She then sent a voice note saying: "I'm either going to call the police on you, yeah, or people are coming round to beat you up... You've got two options... I'm back in London now, Simon. Don't fucking piss me off." She threatened to send people to my mother's home. She threatened to get me beaten up. She threatened my past partners by name, saying she would "smash their faces in." She said she was coming to stay in the front room and that I "had no choice." She said she would call the police if I didn't let her in, and if that didn't work, she would escalate it further. She said I would "have no family, no friends, no nothing."

All of this was said before she returned from holiday on the 8th or 9th of May — the exact day she carried out what she had threatened. She arrived at my mother's home with her boyfriend and caused the incident that led to my arrest. The police saw the evidence on my phone. They acknowledged receiving it. They knew she was not living at my mother's home. They knew she had threatened me. They knew she had threatened my partners. They knew she had threatened to use the police to set me up.

Despite this, they contacted the council and removed me from my own home. They allowed my sister — the person who had threatened me, admitted she wasn't living there, and premeditated the incident — to stay in the property. This should never have happened.

The situation became even worse because both the police and the council, including the neighbourhood support teams, already held Deon's calatral history on their systems. They knew she was homeless. They knew she was high-risk. They knew she had previously been assaulted in the Enfield area. They knew she was registered as vulnerable. When they contacted each other and raised our names — especially when I submitted the bail variation request — these facts should have been addressed fairly and properly. They were not.

Instead, the police and council acted in a way that removed me from my home, ignored the evidence I provided, ignored Deon's risk history, ignored her threats, ignored her admissions, and ignored my legal right to succession. They allowed the person who premeditated the incident to stay in the property, and they displaced the person who was grieving, who lived there, and who had done nothing wrong.

This is why the police should never have contacted the council, and why the council should never have acted on that contact. The evidence proves it. The timeline proves it. The WhatsApp messages prove it. The recordings prove it. My arrest record proves it. My bail history proves it. And the fact that Deon was known to be homeless and high-risk proves it even further.

I was taken to Wood Green Police Station and bailed at 00:38 by Sgt Rainbird. From that moment, everything spiralled. I was re-bailed to 19 June 2026, but I was never properly told. I was then re-bailed again to 8 August 2026 without being informed. My solicitor repeatedly tried to contact the officers, but no one responded to him. I eventually had to contact my solicitor myself and give him the officers' details because the police would not respond to him. Only then did I learn that my bail had been extended again, this time all the way to November 2026. This is now the second extension, and it has left me in limbo for months. During this time, DS Johnston contacted Enfield Council without my permission and against my request. That contact resulted in my succession rights being wrongly interfered with. I was already grieving, already displaced, already prevented from attending my mother's funeral, and already unable to return to my home. The communication between police and the council made everything worse. It took away the only thing I had left — my right to secure my mother's home and protect my future.

I have been left without access to my home, without the ability to manage my mother's estate, without the ability to grieve properly, and without any stability. My bail conditions, the lack of communication, the procedural mistakes, and the interference with my succession claim have all combined to put me in a position that no one should ever be in, especially not while dealing with the death of a parent.

I am asking all of you to acknowledge what has happened and to take immediate steps to put things right. My succession claim must be protected. My property at 23 Byron Terrace must be safeguarded. My rights as the eldest child must be respected. My solicitor must receive full disclosure of any communication between the police and the council. And I must be allowed to move forward without further delays or interference.

I am asking for clarity, fairness, and action. I have lost my mother, my home, my stability, and months of my life because of decisions and communication that were not handled correctly. I need this corrected now.

Kind regards, Simon Cordell Enfield, N9 7DG
